We report the first demonstration of an enhanced spontaneous emission from a single nanoscale ZnO/MgF(2) nanorod (NR). The NR with its large surface area shows a record high Q-factor of $\sim 1.1 \times 10^7$ in a MgF(2) matrix. Its high Q-factor is the result of a perfect mode matching between ZnO and MgF(2) modes that allows low absorption losses to be coupled to the NR and emit light into a far field. Effects of temperature and photoperiod on the changes in onset and duration of puberty in the white sturgeon Acipenser transmontanus. An understanding of the effects of temperature and photoperiod on reproductive physiology is needed to effectively stock juvenile white sturgeon (Acipenser transmontanus) on a commercial basis. Therefore, the effects of both temperature and photoperiod on onset of puberty and ovarian development in early-maturing sturgeon were examined. Fish were held under the following temperature treatments (T): 12 degrees C and 19 degrees C, and photoperiods (P): 12 h light: 12 h dark, e24f408de9
