History of medicine is a continuous and important research subject. Its role lies in the understanding of past conditions, present practices and future directions for the development of medicine. The aim of this paper is to discuss the issue of historicity of drug prescriptions, dealing with the past uses of different drugs in the practice of medicine. It is discussed the problematic relationship between scholarship and the process of history. The papers drawn on the question of the historical nature of drug prescriptions will be presented from 1891 to present. Neil Morrissey and Benji Wilson have been updating us on the hopeful recovery of the Queen's garden at Buckingham Palace. While she is still away for the foreseeable future, the news of the threatened restoration of the Rose Garden should be good news for anyone looking forward to a sunny, warm spring and summer. We should also be able to get some closure on the saga of the lost tapestry in the Palace Chapel, which was lost or removed while the country was in turmoil following the death of the Queen Mother in 2002. The Abbey Theatre's production of Doubt is now on at the Lyric Theatre in Belfast. It is currently being reviewed by The Herald critic, Chris McGreal in his
