The authors gave a retrospective account of the state of health of a group of mentally ill patients who had been treated in psychiatric institutions in the near vicinity of Brno. In a given year the progress in recovery from psychosocial impairment was noted. A high degree of social adaptation was considered as evidence of a favourable prognosis. The results of the study highlight the need to consider the function of work as a determining factor in the process of rehabilitation. When Where Event Details WHY THE WINCHESTER BOOK FESTIVAL 2016 September 5th - 7th Our 27th Winchester Book Festival, the first day is a leaflet drop through your door, day 2 is at the church hall, day 3 is a little bus journey to somewhere worth going for the rest of the week. The Winchester Book Festival is an exciting and unique experience as it brings together both old and new writers in a relaxed, engaging and supportive environment. It's always something different, something unique, something packed with ideas for you and your family to enjoy. It is also not in London - there are no expensive meetings, the ticket costs are fixed and there is no faffing around with train times. However there is an expense because we have to transport the writers and guests back and forth from the Winchester Train Station - but we can organise that for you. And you can help sponsor the event (we're grateful!) or pass the hat round your friends (that's how I brought my family to the festival for the first time). As the founder of the festival, I'm still bemused as to why there is no other Winchester Book Festival. I am determined that the next one is in 2017. So just let me know what you would like and I will see if we can make it happen. By now you should know about the Winchester Book Festival and what we're about, but for those new to the festival, read below for the full skinny. Festival History In April 1992, I was running the London Book Fair,

The poster of the post (1) was a new user so I tried to help him but I also gave him a comment explaining the problem. The comment has been removed by a mod, some others user commented, but comment in my question and his removed too. So my point is... why has my comment been removed and his is not? I'm not sure if this question belongs here, if you consider it belongs somewhere else let me know in the comments. A side note, the comment with "I'll definitely skip this question" appears below the comment I made on this answer. Edit: after clarification, as the same user, that user can't comment. A: I'm the moderator who removed your comment. The reason why I removed it is because I perceived it to be a snarky comment. If you have a problem with something other than the content on this site, you are always welcome to raise a custom flag and explain your problem. In that case, moderators will respond to you personally, and your problem will probably be escalated to the community managers. If the problem isn't solved, they will escalate it further. In this case, you asked that user to post code. If he had posted the code, the comment would have served its purpose well. I'm sorry that your comment was removed. Feel free to give me a ping if you have any further questions. Q: What is the syntax for declaring vectors with static storage duration? I 1cdb36666d
