habit of deciding what to tackle next based on how much time there is in the day. This is a problem. Very few people enjoy, or even understand, the demands on their time in academia. I'm sure you're one of them. So why not embrace it? Relax. Learn the right habits. Learn to choose your battles and to focus. This is not trivial. It was impossible for all those early morning writers to choose wisely. Last week I spent the time that I wouldn't normally have spent on this course reading through the chapters and writing the assignment for the week. I'll be honest; it was nearly impossible. Everything was so confusing. It is not always easy to know what to do when you start a project. At which point to make the switch from one thing to the next? How do you make the most of your time? A problem which is very difficult to solve, which is why I chose to spend my time working on other things. The final thing to note is that the first step is to take the time to properly understand your problem. If you don't understand your problem you will not be able to define your solution. This is so hard. And so important. What's that all about? This is a general life history. A quick note on progress. The time of day I'm writing this has nothing to do with my problems. It is a coincidence. My biggest problem is that I see my time as being scarce. This is the exact opposite of how it should be. I know that time is given to me. And I know that some people have less of it. But I still worry about how I spend it. Especially with a great many things competing for my time. Like I said, it's not a coincidence that I've got this problem. I am actually married to someone with a special needs child. This takes up a lot of time. 6d1f23a050
