Decompositions of intracellular  $Ca^{2+}$ -dependent currents in a highly motile SH-SY5Y cell line. Cells lacking in  $Ca^{2+}$ -dependent depolarizing inward rectifying currents (DIC) fail to migrate and do not form aggregates. In this study, cells were transfected with the DIC genes ShakerH4 or Kv1.4 and  $Ca^{2+}$  currents were recorded with the whole cell patch clamp technique at about 10 min intervals to follow the evolution of the currents as cells became increasingly motile. The DIC currents were rapidly (within 60 min) decomposed into a steady state low and oscillating component, which alternated at a frequency of approximately 1 Hz. The low and oscillating components of the currents were similar to the DIC currents recorded from fast-migrating non-adhesive cells. There was no evidence of a low  $Ca^{2+}$ -activated current. There was a striking similarity between the temporal evolution of the oscillatory component of the  $Ca^{2+}$  currents and that of the oscillatory intracellular  $Ca^{2+}$  concentration ( $[Ca^{2+}]_i$ ) in non-migrating cells. Q: How to automatically trigger bitbucket pipeline to run on push I have a code-build in bitbucket. Pipelines are set to pull and merge, and I use git push to trigger the build. Sometimes people make minor typos, not triggering a rebuild. When one of my colleagues commits a change and pushes a blank repo, our pipeline is triggered. I would like to have the pipeline automatically triggered when someone pushes the repo, but without adding some feature to bitbucket that would allow "once-off" triggering of a build. Is this possible with the current version of bitbucket? A: There is
